

Rapid Recovery Supplies Refrigerant Recovery at Hewlett-Packard in Cupertino, CA

Concord, California – March 31, 2007 – Rapid Recovery, a Contra Costa County based refrigerant recovery company, recently completed a project for Hellwig Plumbing and Heating of Santa Clara, California, at Hewlett-Packard in Cupertino, California.

As part of their plan to upgrade equipment, Hewlett-Packard needed to remove three existing chillers. Ron Azevedo of Hellwig Plumbing and Heating was awarded the contract and contacted Rapid Recovery on March 14, 2007. With a tight deadline to perform the work, Hellwig Plumbing & Heating scheduled Rapid Recovery to recover the refrigerant the next day. Rapid Recovery was tasked with recovering 2 chillers containing approximately 1000 lbs of R-11 each. There was an additional smaller chiller which contained approximately 200 lbs of R-22. Rapid Recovery was able to recover all three chillers in one day, allowing Hellwig Plumbing & Heating to get a jump start on the project.

Refrigerant recovery is a time consuming process for most contractors. Having a company which specializes in high speed and reliable refrigerant abatement is becoming a requirement in the industry. Contractors must take advantage of anything that assists them in completing their jobs on or ahead of schedule. Companies like Rapid Recovery certainly fill that need in the area of refrigerant abatement. Rapid Recovery's Derek Oosterhouse said, "We look at each job as a way to assist our customer in completing their project in a timely manner. If we save them hours or even days on a job, we are providing a value added service to them."

Rapid Recovery also provided the vital EPA documentation and the recovery cylinders. Each chiller was also tagged with a bright orange numbered label to confirm the refrigerant had been recovered.
